

Module: MNO3332 Leading Groups and Teams

Session: Semester 2, AY2017/2018

Instructor: Ke Michael Mai

Module Description:

Groups and Teams are one of the most important work format in our modern organization. This module objective is to study the behaviour of groups and their members. Our job is to try and understand when, if, and how phenomena change as a function of group structure. The module will loosely follow Tuckman's (1965) forming, storming, norming, and performing model of group development. Everything that follows depends on successfully building the team.

Learning Outcomes:

Here are some of the objectives of the course:

- Gain the ability to identify and pick the right members for your team
- Gain knowledge in building teamwork skills in your team
- Develop skills in constructing team charters
- Develop skills in building a team identity
- Develop skills in dealing with conflict within your group
- Gain skill in improving a group's ability to brainstorm effectively
- Develop skills at improving group decision-making
- Develop skills in employing different motivational techniques
- Develop skills in implementing change within the organization

Modes of Teaching and Learning:

Academic integrity and honesty is essential for the pursuit and acquisition of knowledge. The University and School dishonesty is any misrepresentation with the intent to deceive, or failure to acknowledge the source, or falsification or inappropriate use of resources.

Plagiarism is 'the practice of taking someone else's work or ideas and passing them off as one's own' (The New Oxford Dictionary of English). Students should adopt this rule - You have the obligation to make clear to the assessor which is your own work, and everything being presented for assessment is being presented as entirely your own work. This is a minimum standard.
